- How the pools work- International Experience Canada?

If you're eligible, you'll be placed into one or more pools of International Experience Canada (IEC) candidates.

Normally, your profile will stay in the pool until: you receive an Invitation to Apply for a work permit or CIC removes all the profiles from the pool(s) at the end of the season. Invitations are regularly issued to candidates in the IEC pools during the IEC season.

- What other costs should I prepare for?

- Optional pre-booked hostel or hotel accommodation ($30 CAD-$120 per night). Air Transportation to and from Canada.
- Fees paid directly to International Experience Canada and Citizenship and Immigration: $126 CAD and $7 ETA (+ $100 for Open Work Permit- Work and Travel participants)
- Travel health insurance (required). Your insurance must cover: medical care, hospitalization, and repatriation (returning you to your country in the event of severe illness, injury or death).

- Can I leave Canada and re-enter?

Yes. You can leave the country and come back during the 12 months your visa is valid.

- How much will I earn in Canada?

The minimum wage in Canada depends on the province and generally ranges from $10.20 to $12.50 CAD per hour (with higher pay more often in northern Canada). It's $12.20 for Alberta. Service employees (those working in restaurants, bars, etc.) are usually paid minimum wage as tips complete their wages. Generally, Canadians tip 15% or more. Most ski resorts pay close to the minimum wage unless participants are hired for supervising roles. Rates of pay vary from industry to industry.

- Can I extend my visa?

You may only participate for a maximum of 12 months. However, you may participate on the program a second time if you wish. If you wish to apply for another Work Permit you will need to submit new application.

- Do I have to work for the same employer the entire time of my stay?

- Working Holiday Visa holders may switch employers as they wish since their Work Permit is not job specific.
- Young Professional and International Co-Op Internship Categories are job specific. Therefore, they can work only for specified employer.

- How much money should I bring with me at the start?

You should have access to at least $2,500 CAD and be prepared to show proof of this at the time of applying for your Letter of Introduction.

- How much do housing, transportation, and food cost in Canada?

A room in a shared house or apartment usually costs $400 to $700 CAD per month in Alberta. In cities of Banff and Canmore there is a very limited public transportation as cities are not very large in size. The most common source of transportation is bike (during the summer) or shared car transportation. Calgary has very good public transportation. Groceries should cost around $200 to $250 CAD per month.

- Where will I stay?

Most travelers have already planned accommodation independently for the early part of the program. We can recommend the most popular websites. Some workplaces offer discounted accommodation themselves.
